Food challenge - what you need to know

Information for patients, relatives and carers

Introduction

Food challenges are tests that are performed in hospital to see if your child is allergic to or able to eat a particular food. This leaflet explains what to expect when your child has a food challenge. Please contact the paediatric allergy team using the details on page 4 if you have any questions or concerns.

If you decide to go ahead with the challenge you must book it by calling 020 3311 6611.

What is a food challenge?

A food challenge is when your child is fed a certain food under close medical supervision, as there is some risk of them being allergic to it. It starts with a very small amount of the food and then gradually gives bigger doses (usually every 20 minutes), until a reaction occurs or the 'top dose' is eaten without any allergic reaction. The 'top dose' is a normal portion for your child's age. A food challenge usually lasts for five hours.

What are the benefits of having a food challenge?

A food challenge will confirm whether your child has a food allergy or not. If your child is successful and passes the challenge, we advise you to introduce the food into their diet regularly, generally on a weekly basis. This may help you and your family to lead a more normal life, with fewer dietary restrictions and without fear of your child reacting to that specific food. If your child reacts at the challenge, they will need to continue to avoid that food and this information should be passed on to their school or nursery. Some parents and children have expressed that going through a failed challenge has helped them to better understand and manage their allergies.

What are the possible risks?

There is a potential risk of your child having an allergic reaction to the food tested. This is why the test is done in hospital and not at home. An allergy clinical nurse specialist will carefully monitor them and check for any signs of allergic reaction. A doctor will always be available if needed. If your child experiences an allergic reaction during the challenge, they should stop eating the food immediately. Medicine(s) will be given to relieve any symptoms and to stop the reaction from getting worse – this may be an antihistamine such as cetirizine or, in the case of a more severe reaction, adrenaline auto-injector (Epipen®, Jext® or Emerade®).

Why has my child been advised to have a food challenge?

This is usually because your child's chances of tolerating the food are high (based on their history and test results), and introducing that food into their diet may help to make their life easier.

Please take your time to decide whether you would like your child to have the food challenge test. If you feel your child might be very reluctant to try the food on the challenge day, or afterwards on a regular basis, then please try and discuss this with them before coming into hospital.

What are the alternatives to having a food challenge?

You may choose for your child not to have a food challenge and just continue to avoid the food they might be allergic to. Your child may grow out of an allergy but a food challenge is the only safe and sure way to find out whether your child has a food allergy or not.

What should I do to prepare my child for the food challenge?

Preparing your child for their hospital visit will help them understand what is happening and can improve your child's willingness to cooperate on the day. Talking to your child beforehand will give them time to ask any questions they may have. Always give them truthful, factual information. You may wish to bring some familiar toys or books on the day to help your child feel at ease.

Your child can eat a light snack and drink during the challenge, and also have lunch once the challenge is completed, so please bring a packed lunch. We will provide the food for your child's challenge, but it is also a good idea to bring other foods they like, so that we can use it to disguise the taste of the food being challenged, if needed. You will need to stay with your child at all times during the challenge, so you may also want to bring some food for yourself too. Only one parent will be allowed to stay during the challenge, as space is limited.

Please note If your child is having a food challenge to baked egg or baked milk (e.g. muffin), we will give you a recipe to bake some muffins yourself and bring them in on the day.

Your child must be well with no cough, cold or recent infections for at least two weeks before the challenge. If they have asthma or eczema this must be well controlled and stable.

If your child is taking medications, please follow these instructions:

Antihistamines: Your child may be taking a regular antihistamine such as chlorphenamine, cetirizine or loratadine (Piriton®, Zirtek® or Clarityn®). These will need to be stopped five days before the challenge. Please note that some cough medicines will also contain antihistamine (e.g. Tixylix®).

Asthma medication: Your child should continue to take their regular preventative asthma inhalers (usually brown, orange or purple). Blue inhalers (salbutamol (Ventolin®) or terbutaline (Bricanyl®)); if your child is wheezy, coughing or has needed their blue inhaler more often than usual in the two weeks before the challenge, please contact the allergy team on 020 3312 6091 before the challenge day to discuss this further.

Please bring your child's allergy medications with you on the challenge day, including the adrenaline auto-injector(s), if they have any. Please complete the checklist at the end of this leaflet to make sure your child can have the test.

Please note Only one parent / guardian is allowed to stay with the child during the challenge, as we have limited space.

What will happen on the challenge day?

On arrival, we will explain the challenge in detail and answer any questions you or your child may have. We will ask you to sign a consent form on behalf of your child (so the person attending the appointment with your child must be the parent or legal guardian). The nurse will then ensure your child is fit and well to have the challenge, and take their temperature, blood pressure and oxygen levels. These will be repeated during the test.

Your child will usually receive up to five increasing doses of the food tested every 20 minutes (up to a normal portion size for their age). We also need to wait and observe your child for a further two hours. If your child has an allergic reaction before the fifth dose, then no more doses of the food will be given. The reaction will be treated as required by the medical team and your child will need to be observed for two to four hours before they can go home. Rarely, in the unlikely event of a serious reaction, your child might need to stay overnight in hospital.

What will happen after the challenge day?

The nurse will tell you the outcome of the challenge and provide advice accordingly. After a negative (successful) challenge, we advise you to introduce the food into your child's diet on a regular basis. After a positive (unsuccessful) challenge, you should avoid the food. The nurse may go through your child's allergy action plans with you to ensure you feel comfortable with the management of allergic reactions. We will arrange appropriate follow-up in the allergy clinic if needed.

Who can I contact for queries or questions?

If you have any questions about the challenge, or difficulties reading English, please call the allergy nurses on 020 3312 6091. It will ask you to leave a voice message and the allergy nurses will get back to you within two to three working days. Please note that this number is not for urgent healthcare queries. For urgent queries contact 999 (for emergencies), 111 (for non-emergencies) or your GP, as appropriate. Please see the table below for other useful contact numbers.

How do I book the food challenge if I wish to go ahead?

If you and your child are happy to go ahead, please phone the booking team on 020 3311 6611 within 28 days of your last visit. You will need to say which food they will try in hospital. If you do not phone to book the challenge, you will receive a reminder letter by post. If you do not phone to book within 42 days of your visit, you will no longer be able to book the challenge.

If you need to cancel a challenge that has been booked please call 020 3311 6611. If you do not attend on the challenge day, please contact the number above as soon as possible. Otherwise, you will not be able to rebook the challenge.

Pre-challenge checklist

Please complete the checklist the day before the food challenge and bring it with you on the day.
