What is potassium permanganate?

It is a mild antiseptic and astringent (something that dries the skin). It comes in the form of a solution or tablets (Permitabs®) that you dissolve in water (also known as soaks).

Potassium permanganate soaks can be used to treat a range of skin conditions including:

- infected eczema
- leg ulcers that may be weeping (leaking) or blistering
- external wounds

Potassium permanganate is for external use only. Never swallow the tablets or take them internally – this can be fatal.

How to use potassium permanganate

Always wear gloves before touching the potassium permanganate soaks as they can stain and irritate your hands.

1. Preparing to use potassium permanganate soaks

The hospital pharmacy, or your local pharmacy if the prescription was written by your GP, will give you the potassium permanganate tablets. The strength of each tablet is 400 milligrams (mg).

- Start by washing your hands, then put on your gloves.
- You will need a clean container that is large enough for you to soak the affected area(s). It is best to set aside a particular container to use for your soaks, and not to use it for any other purpose, such as drinking or food preparation.
• Line the container with a clear or light coloured bin liner bag

• Fill this with four litres of warm - not hot - tap water

• Add one Permitabs® tablet and mix gently until it has completely dissolved. The water should turn a light pink colour

• The solution is now ready to use for soaking

2. Using potassium permanganate solution soaks

• If you are treating your hands or feet, put Vaseline® on your nails first to stop them from staining

• Place the affected areas into the water

• Soak for 10-15 minutes then remove from the water and pat the area dry. Alternatively, we may recommend soaking a gauze dressing in the solution and applying it to your skin for 10 minutes.

• Pour the solution down the sink and wash the container thoroughly

• Apply any prescribed cream or ointment and/or dressings to the affected area(s)

We usually recommend that you do this once a day until the weeping has stopped or as advised by your doctor.
Possible side effects of potassium permanganate solution soaks

- Skin irritation if the solution has not been diluted properly
- It can irritate the eyes and mucous membranes (e.g. mouth, nose, ears, genitals, anus) – avoid contact with these areas
- Skin dryness
- Can burn your skin if you soak your skin for too long
- Staining of clothing, fabrics and ceramic basins
- Do not eat or drink when using this product

If you accidentally swallow a tablet or solution of potassium permanganate:

- drink plenty of water
- do not try to make yourself vomit
- seek medical attention immediately

Store the potassium permanganate tablets and equipment in a safe place and out of the reach of children.
